Feature Story

The Southport and Kincardine chapters of the Canadian Federation of University Women (CFUW) are making a difference. For over a quarter of a century, they have been promoting education and life-long learning, awarding local scholarships, and advocating on behalf of their communities on such matters as health care, childcare, and the prevention of violence against women. But there is another side to these groups as well, involving book clubs, dinner get-togethers, theatre outings, luncheons ... Mahjong. The two organizations are clearly demonstrating the power of women working – and socializing – together.
